"As an elementary school educator, I love a picture book that encourages counting backwards—what a tremendous skill that is. With charming illustrations and words that are sure to dazzle, this is a must-have for any primary classroom as well as a wonderful gift for anyone with young children or grandchildren." - Award Winning Author, Christy Wopat

5-Star Review from Readers' Favorite: ". . .a clever and fun way to teach young readers how to count forward and backward . . . The author leads young readers through a series of fun-induced numbering skills that will have them chuckling and wanting to dance around."

"I'm a dad to four kids and grandpa to two grandkids and I've never read a counting backwards book. It's fun to read out loud, too!"

Review from Reader Views Kids: "Good Night (Not Really): Let's Count FORWARD and BACKWARD is a quirky, colorful new addition worth checking out. . . The text takes you to fun, unexpected places, while the illustrations are cheerful, warm, and endearing. Unique and humorous adjectives sprinkled throughout the book make reading the book fun and funny."

"My little one's LOVE this book. My girls giggle every time we get to the part where it isn't ACTUALLY a good night book but a good morning book!"

"I am an elementary teacher and I have never seen a book that practices backward counting! It is a great tool for kiddos to practice counting up to 10, but then backwards too. The illustrations and story are so colorful and fun in a way that keeps kids engaged and enjoy counting. I would recommend to teachers and parents alike!"

"GOOD NIGHT (NOT REALLY) is a counting book with a twist. Lisa and Charlie compare their good night book to one sweet candy explosion, two big bad elephants, three noisy billy goats, etc. Author Nan Evenson breaks the pattern with a surprise when readers get to 8. It's beautifully illustrated with moons and stars, colorful fairies, and animated mice and mini cats. As a teacher, it would be delightful to share this with students when they arrive as a "Good morning" book."
